

Introduction

As a mother and grandmother, sometimes I sit and observe what our children and grandchildren are doing and how they are relating to their surroundings.

Have you even wondered, after looking into their little faces and eyes, what is going on in their minds? Are we as parents and grandparents teaching them about everyday life and death?

I know that from my own experience I probably could have done a better job explaining life and also death.

These stories should certainly bring curiosity into the child's mind, be prepared for questions as I certainly was not.

Not all the stories deal with death but also the joys of being a child and the experiences they can learn provided we give them the chance.
